Home Again.

Home Again. BACK FROM ENGLAND AND A "BIGGER MAN" THAN EVER. The author of "Progress and Poverty" has returned in New York with remarkable demonstrations of his popularity. After making a lecturing tour in the United Kingdom, it appears that he has returned with increasing favor. Mr. George was born at Philadelphia, Pa. After leaving school he learned the business of typesetting. When he was twenty years of age he left his native city for California. Failing to make money with a prospecting party in British Columbia with whom he had gone, Mr. George returned to that city and worked at his trade. Subsequently he graduated as a reporter and editorial writer, and became a newspaper proprietor. He sold his weekly sheet in 1875. The next year he went on the Democratic side in the presidential campaign. He held office under the city government, San Francisco, for a period beginning in 1877. In 1879 he finished "Progress and Poverty." He has resided in New York since 1880. He was correspondent of an Irish-American newspaper in 1881-2. In 1883, 1885 and 1886 he lectured in Great Britain. He has written several other works than the one named, including an argument for free trade. Mr. George was a Cleveland man last fall. He has a wife and four children.

The Modesty of Boyhood.

Philadelphia Press. Little six-year-old Jenny being permitted to see his new-born baby brother—each boy in the family—remarked: "Mamma, I am so glad it is a boy." "Why, Jenny, are you glad it is a boy?" "Because, mamma, we will soon have enough for a new ball team." "How many does it take?" asked the fond parent, when Jenny innocently replied: "Only nine, mamma."

This is a correct report of the conversation occurring between mamma and little son in a village near Philadelphia recently.

The Extradition of Burke.

HECTOR MANSFIELD HOWELL, who managed the case for the prosecution. Burke is to be given up to the Illinois authorities. His extradition was the result of able work, the leading part in which was done by the lawyer of whom we give a likeness. Hector Mansfield Howell was born in 1842, in Prince Edward county, Ontario. He is descended from the Howells of Philadelphia, who being royalists at the time of the revolution, were compelled to flee from that city. They went to Canada, where they were presented with large grants of land. Mr. Howell was educated at Albert college, Belleville, called to the Ontario bar at Toronto in 1871, and to the Manitoba bar in 1879. In 1885 he was made a Queen's counsel. He is a Conservative politician, and was a supporter of the late John Norquay. His political ambition has been defeated so far, and lately he has confined his efforts almost exclusively to the practice of his profession.
